

The plans below show the South Wing of Walton Museum in 2008 and in 2012 after it was redeveloped.

The map illustrates some change to South Wing of Walton Museum between 2008 and 2012. Overall, South Wing experienced considerable transform during the period shown. The most noticeable differences between two map are all room in underground floor became larger and third house was built more floor and gable.

As can be seen from the map, entrance where connecting with path was replaced by entrance hall and terrace on the second floor. In addition, special exhibition room where underground floor remained unchanged and during the time. Moreover, reception room was still exist and functional transform into reception-cloaks room in 2012. Area on the third floor of center house row was used for building restaurant and connecting with terrace.

Turning to the other features, stairs was demolished and replaced by lift, where located between two adjacent house row, which making the transportation to many floor easier. Besides, while reading room was remained unchanged, cloaks room in underground was replaced by children play area. Meanwhile, self-service and exhibition room were built on respectively, the third and fourth floor.